A WORD OF WELCOME FROM THE CHANCELLOR

I heartily welcome you to Covenant University's 9th Convocation Ceremony for the Release of Eagles 2014.

This year's convocation brings us yet closer to our aspiration of raising for our nation and continent an army of pathfinders, pacesetters and trailblazers in all fields of human endeavour, who will rebuild the old wastes and reclaim Africa's lost glory. Through the help of God, this vision is being validated in the external context of the University both nationally and internationally.

Covenant University in her twelve years of existence has maintained a culture of excellence in education and this has produced significant results, which have received accolades nationally and internationally. For two years running, the First Class graduates of the University have emerged tops in the Presidential Special Scholarship Scheme for Innovation and Development (PRESSID) in Nigeria (2013 & 2014).

Our graduates are recognized all over the world. Most of them have gained postgraduate admissions to world-class universities where they graduated as the best students in most cases. They are registering indelible footprints in the academia and the world of work. Quite a good number of them have become employers of labour. Thus, helping to address the unemployment challenges in our nation.

To further attest to their employability and resourcefulness, the current Registrar, the Dean of Students' Affairs, and the Director of Physical Planning and Development of Covenant University are all graduates of the University and are doing very well in their current assignments.

Our goal to be ranked among the top ten universities in the world by the year 2022 is very much on course.

A notable landmark was achieved by organizing the 1st International Conference on African Development Issues, which addressed key development concerns in Africa and how the continent could catch up with advanced economies. Among the resource persons and experts at the conference were two Nobel Laureates, Professor Thomas J. Sargent, a 2011 Nobel Prize Winner in Economic Sciences and currently a Professor of Economics at the New York University; and Professor Eric S. Maskin, a 2007 Nobel Prize Winner in Economic Sciences and currently the Adams University

Professor at Harvard University.

Shortly after the conference, the African Leadership Development Centre, Covenant University organized a 3-day programme on Conflict Management and Resolution: A Leadership Competence Development Workshop, aimed at finding indigenous solutions to contemporary socio-political, economic and cultural issues affecting Nigeria and Africa at large. After robust discussions and debate, the Workshop made far-reaching resolutions and recommendations, which will help solve perennial conflicts in the continent.

This year also, the University instituted Leadership Diploma Certificate Course for our graduating class. This is part of our efforts to imbue our products with relevant leadership skills to effect the desired change in the society as new generation of leaders. Our graduands today, happen to be the first beneficiaries of the programme.

Ladies and gentlemen, I welcome you again to this 9th convocation ceremony to witness the release of eagles 2014.

Thank you and be richly blessed in Jesus Name! Amen!

THE RELEASE OF EAGLES 2014

- PROFESSOR CHARLES K. AYO, VICE-CHANCELLOR, COVENANT UNIVERSITY

I count it a great privilege and honour to welcome this distinguished gathering to the 9th Convocation Ceremony of Covenant University today, the 27th of June, 2014.

This Convocation ceremony is certainly a moment that we should all savor and enjoy, noting the faithfulness of God in the affairs of the University. If we take a quick look around us, I am sure we all will agree that Covenant University has come a long way in charting paths for others to follow.

It was John F. Kennedy who said, "The progress of a nation can be no swifter than her progress in education", "the human mind" he said, "is our fundamental resource". (Paraphrased)

In our quest to turn out quality graduates for accelerated national development, the University is strategically driving Vision 10:2022. The mandate is to get the University listed as one of the top ten universities in the world within the next ten years. This vision, tagged [1 of 10 in 10] is getting more real by the day. The news of the success of the 1st International Conference on African Development Issues (ICADI) is still making the rounds. The presence of two Nobel Laureates in economics, Professor Eric Stark Maskin (2007 winner) and Professor Thomas Sargent (2011 winner) as lead speakers, is a unique and unparalleled feat in the history of University Education in Nigeria and indeed Africa.

Moreover, under the Summer School Programme, the University is billed to host a total of 10 Conferences and Workshops having in attendance Visiting Professors from our overseas collaborating universities. During the period, our students would undertake exchange programmes at our partner universities abroad.

Another notable landmark was attained this year. This set of graduands is the first to be awarded a certificate in Leadership in addition to their various degrees of studies. This is a major accomplishment in fulfilling the Leadership gaps in our country and Africa in general. Furthermore, for the second time running, CU topped the list of successful candidates in the 2014 Presidential Special Scholarship Development for Innovation and Development (PRESSID) by producing 19 out of 200 First Class Graduates of all Nigerian Universities for sponsorship to 25 top universities in the world. It will be recalled that the University topped the list in the maiden edition with 10 out of 101 successful candidates. To God alone be all the glory!

It is on this note that I want to congratulate the graduands of today, their parents and the prospective intakes for the 2014/2015 academic session for making the right choice of coming to Covenant University.

To our distinguished guests and well-wishers, I thank you all for your roles in making today's event a huge success. Welcome to this 9th Convocation ceremony of Covenant University.

Thank you and God bless you.

Professor C. K. Ayo
Vice-Chancellor
